

WORKSHOP CALL FOR PAPERS

The Dynamics of Inequality: Long-Term Perspectives

University of Florence, Novoli Campus
Florence (Italy), September 18–19, 2026

The Department of Economics and Management (DISEI), University of Florence, invites submissions for the workshop The Dynamics of Inequality: Long-Term Perspectives, to be held on September 18–19, 2026, in Florence.

This interdisciplinary workshop brings together economists, economic historians, sociologists, demographers, and statisticians working on the long-term evolution of inequality. The aim is to foster exchange across disciplines, theoretical approaches, empirical strategies, and data sources, with particular attention to historical and long-run dynamics.

TOPICS

- Long-term trends in income, wealth, education, and health inequality
- Intergenerational mobility and persistence
- Inequality of opportunity in historical perspective
- Longitudinal and historical microdata
- Theoretical perspectives on long-run inequality dynamics
- Climate change, ecological transition, and inequality
- Historical and forward-looking analyses
